Excerpt: ... We work for Food which sustains life that we may work for more, and so live on from day to day. Therefore Food is real wealth, real capital, and no other form of wealth or capital can ever take its place. With such capital the people may work little or much, easy or hard as the State shall require, and none would be any the poorer or the richer for it. The people may produce anything and everything they require, and in fact want for nothing, as profit or loss would be no longer a consideration. Then only the Health, the Happiness, the Comfort and the Welfare of all would be the one great leading aim. By adopting this system of Food Payment for work done every individual would then receive that fair and really just reward for his services which nature intended, because by food all must live, and by their labour they would earn their right to the means of life. Besides this the system of Food payment would form a check upon greed, which in its nature and tendency, as we too often see, is as bad in its own way as reckless extravagance and waste. To permit and maintain the highest form of Social life we must take away all possible means of temptation, and let nothing exist which could pander to selfishness, especially that form of it which has got such a tight grasp of us under the present system. Our system of values, which is everything and anything but justice, has existed for centuries. It is getting old, decayed and rotten, and let us hope it will soon be dead and buried, never more to be seen in the land of the living. It is now time we adopted a higher, nobler, and more just system, one which will suit our advanced position, and one more consistent with Civilisation, one more consistent with Christianity, and one more consistent with Humanity. If we were...
